

Open House Days – going behind the scenes

Twice a year, traditional manufactory Wendt & Kühn opens its workshops to the public by hosting its Open House Days. Visitors can experience for themselves the fine German craftsmanship that goes into making each of our angels, Blossom Kinder and music boxes. Particularly popular among families, our Tinker's Row set up on these days allows young visitors to try their own hand at the challenge of painting of a figurine they glued together themselves. Aided of course by one of our helpful experienced painters since each brush stroke and spot of color needs to be precisely positioned in order to achieve the desired appearance. The experience quickly reveals just how much intuitive feeling and patience is necessary to paint a figurine according to its historical design.

Photographer: René Pech